Solving America's Child Care Crisis

Finding and affording quality child care and early learning options shouldn't be the reason parents choose not to work. Yet for years, the high cost of quality care and the limited supply across the country have created insurmountable challenges for too many families. Before the COVID-19 pandemic, a staggering majority of Americans faced challenges finding quality child care options in their community and affording the care once they found it. Now, as families return to work, they are finding these child care challenges still exist and, in many cases, have only gotten worse - holding back families and New Mexico's economy. There is no question child care is an integral pillar supporting New Mexico's economic recovery and that families need a stronger system of care that works.

Wells Fargo economists, using labor market data, calculated that the historic drop in child care employment from pre-pandemic levels is affecting over 460,000 families nationwide—with a measurable impact on the U.S. workforce, particularly women.

New Mexico Parents Struggle to Find and Afford Quality Child Care. In New Mexico, many parents at every income level are unable to enter, return to, or remain in the workforce due to child care challenges, while others are forced to settle for unsafe, low-quality care arrangements they would never otherwise choose for their children, in order to work.

According to data from the Bipartisan Policy Center:

- In New Mexico, there are 83,390 children under the age of 5 in need of child care, yet only 69,940 child care slots
- Over 25.8% of kids under 5 in New Mexico are without the child care they need
- Rural communities in New Mexico are more underserved than urban communities

Parents in New Mexico spend an average of \$9,299 for center-based infant care and \$8,080 for home-based infant care each year, putting quality child care options out of reach for many families.

Pandemic relief provided by Congress prevented the industry's collapse, but didn't address systematic shortcomings that have plagued families, child care providers, and our economy for years. The existing structure of America's child care market is unsustainable. While most parents can't find or afford quality child care options, child care providers can only charge what families in their area can afford, which often leads to near-poverty wages for early educators and ultimately an untenable business model overall.

According to the Center for the Study of Child Care Employment:

- In 2019, the median wage for child care workers in New Mexico was $10.00. For preschool teachers, the median wage was $13.66.
- New Mexico early educators with a bachelor's degree are paid 50.6% less than their colleagues in the K-8 system.
- The poverty rate for early educators in New Mexico is 27.4%, much higher than for New Mexico workers in general (12.7%) and nearly 6.8 times as high as for K-8 teachers (4.1%).

Current Federal and State Programs Only Serve a Fraction of New Mexico Children. Existing public investments currently only serve 44,671 children out of a total population of 135,114 under the age of six, leaving families to pay high prices out of pocket or with no care options at all. New investment from Congress would allow New Mexico to expand its reach to ensure that families can find and afford quality child care options that meet their needs.
